Hi Patrick,

Here is the latest report. As you can see, it's from FY 2019. I'll keep you posted on updates to the webpage.

Thanks,

Viet

Thank you. Is there a timeline as to when the webpage should be back up? Could you please send over the latest report on official time?

-Patrick

You don't often get email from phauf@dallasexpress.org. Learn why this is important

Any progress on this? I'll check-in tomorrow. Thanks!

Viet,

Thanks for the quick response. I got an extension to noon EST tomorrow. Below is a more in depth breakdown.

The below Wayback Machine link shows the OPM's "Reports on Official Time" from each year.

<https://web.archive.org/web/20230713125544/https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/labor-management-relations/reports-on-official-time/>

That page, which was active as early as last month, now bounces back.

<https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/labor-management-relations/reports-on-official-time/>

Any explanation for this would be greatly appreciated.
Thanks!

Best,

Patrick

Patrick, could you share more context on this story?

Also, could you share the wayback link again? It may not have linked properly.

An extension would be great. We are approaching near COB and will need to circle with folks on this.

Thanks.

To whom it may concern,

Hello! This is Patrick Hauf with The Dallas Express. I'm writing a story on the OPM and want to reach out for comment.

I noticed the historic reports on official time were removed from your website. Here is the link from Wayback Machine. Why is this? Is there a new webpage or will you no longer post this data?

My deadline is 5 pm EST today. I may be able to get an extension if needed. It would be of great benefit to our readers to have your team included on this for clarity. Thanks!

Best,

Patrick
